why are things split

putting the dry
and the wet
next to each other
is the only thing to do

friction
is
everything

a spoon is technology
a song is technology
a hand is technology
a coffee is technology
a belief is technology
dna is technology

technology
transfer
of
power

there are 23 ways
to remember

silence

but
only
1 way
break
it

either you're
in

or

you're

your
dna
spirals
are actually
microscopic
radio antennae
sending and receiving
signs and signals
to and from the
universe

the grass
is wet
and
is still in gathering mode
which
reminds me
of a story
how the universe
began

(if it did)

...like a mustard plant growing
on the side of the road
paying no attention...
then your car speeds by
hits a stone
stone flips
hits plant
seeds fly
into air
someone
breathes in a
memory
